More details Well, the ultimate is maybe a little hyperbole, but I thought it would be helpful to collect together all the things I learned about saving money in Amazon.com in one place. If you ever buy items on Amazon, you might find some of these tactics to be useful. It will prove hard to find an actual Amazon coupon code, but there are many ways to save. Why use Amazon to search for offers and discounts? Not everyone likes to shop online, but there really is no quicker way to find deals and price comparison points than Amazon. Consider these statistics: Online shopping hit $2.29 billion in sales just last Week. Overall satisfaction with online shopping is high – 83%Three quarters of U.S. adults with an Internet connection have made online purchases in the last year Amazon is the largest online retailer, and it sells almost all through its distribution or through its market partners. Even if you don't make a purchase online, it's very useful to check Amazon's product comparison and user reading before purchase. How to save money with AmazonThi said it's true that Amazon may not have the absolute best price all time – are close in my experience. If you're looking for the best ways to cut total costs on the things you buy every day, it pays to understand how best to use Amazon. Here are some key ways to unlock my savings regularly. Amazon PrimeThi's a heavy user of Amazon's services and products, I think Amazon Prime pays more than it pays for itself, so let's focus on that first. Prime is a service that allows you to get two-day delivery on virtually every item that Amazon sells. There is no minimum purchase threshold for this, too. Once you have it, you'll find it's much easier to buy gifts and lots of household items through Amazon than it is to go to the store and shop for them – and it's often cheaper, too. You can really use Amazon as part of price comparisons, even on small items. Along with this comes Prime Instant Video Library, which is a service that is very comparable to Netflix. While streaming video selection isn't as good as Netflix (in my opinion), there's enough unique content here that you'll have more than enough to watch over the years. If you're thinking of restricting cable, it's a pretty solid Netflix-esque replacement for it. A Kindle lending library is another option if you have a Kindle device. If you have a Kindle and you are a prime user, you can rent one book a month from the kindle lending library. It's basically a free book. I think this is a much smaller perk given that I can get e-books from my library, but there are a lot of good books in the library that are well worth reading. Amazon Prime also has free testing if you want to try it out. It takes thirty days and can be a very sensible thing that starts around Thanksgiving, as you can receive free two days of shipping on any Christmas items you buy. Also, if you're a student, you can get a six-month trial version of Prime, and then you get a 50% discount if you continue with the program. To me, this adds up to more than the annual cost of $99. Of course, it depends on your specific use, but it opens up more cost-saving options. Amazon MomAmazon Mama is a program that gets all the great Amazon Prime features listed above in addition to 20% off all diapers. It takes a lot of planning to find coupons to get diapers for discounted prices, so many moms like Amazon Mama are using it because they automatically get this discount. Super Saver ShippingAs above, Amazon doesn't offer free super saver delivery on most purchases over $25 if you're not the first member. In my experience, super safe packages are a week. That's not bad, but I don't think it usually costs me. I'm going to want $18, and then I'm going to see the shipping costs. Of course, if I get something else for $7 that I don't really need, then delivery is free. The catch is that I don't need this item for $7. If you find yourself with this dilemma more than once a month, it's only worth it for those savings. Price and offer there are a trail of different daily arrangements and gold box and outlet and warehouse sites that need to be found inside amazon if you want them, but the problem with these types of daily soothings is that they often convince you to buy things you don't really need. (I have the same problem with services like Groupon.) If you want to know the difference between Amazon's 'deal' page, here's an explanation:Amazon Gold Box – Amazon Gold Box is where you can find flash offers that have an end date. Here you can find anything from computer software to clothing. Amazon Warehouse – If you love getting items you need for less, consider buying an open box and used items that you can find in an Amazon repository. However, my solution for getting discounts is not to use these services. Instead, I use a price observation tool to help me identify when the items I want or need are dropping below a certain price threshold. Currently, my favorite tool for this is CamelCamelCamel.With CamelCamelCamel, all you are doing is to set a list of items that you can buy if the price is right, determine what this is the right price, and then automatically watch all daily site offers for you, as well as other sales prices. When something appears within the price threshold, it warns you that you can buy it. You can also use JungleSearch and only search items in a certain category that are very discounting on Amazon. Cat Alford regularly uses both of these services to find the best deals on Amazon. Subscribe and SaveI covered Subscribe and Save program in detail some time ago. I don't see it as a lot of bail money, but I see it as a time-saver (meaning you use offline at one point to take some pressure off more intense times later). It's simple: find a household product you use regularly, subscribe to it on Amazon, and get to your house on a regular schedule. It works very well for diapers, laundry and so on, but prices are slightly high for a single item. Prices are much better when you subscribe to five or more items, which earns you a 15% discount on all the items you subscribe to. Buy Used If you pick up a book or DVD or something, it's worth checking the buy used section in this item's list to see if you can save some money by using the version of the item. I'd be happy to take a copy of a book that someone else has read if it saves me 50% off the price of a cover or more. Free Android Apps If you have an Android device, Amazon delivers a free app every day. Usually, the app is middle game, but not always – occasionally you'll find a really useful app or a great game. Used textbooks When I was in college, used textbooks were a big part of how I could afford school. There were semesters where buying all my new books would be closer to $1,000, but by searching second-hand I can trim that for 50% or more. Amazon makes this very easy to serve as for second-hand textbooks. Their textbook center makes it easy to search for books for your class and, more importantly, search for second-hand editions at a very good price. Even if you don't beat local stores on and off campus, you can still use this as another point to compare shopping. There is also the possibility of renting some textbooks that can save you important money. For example, you can hire David R. Klein's Organic Chemistry text for about 50% of the price of buying hard. In addition, there is also the option to rent Kindle versions of textbooks that can both save money and backpack space. For example, you can rent a Klein book for about 50% of the discount at a Kindle for a semester. This is perfect if you have a tablet, in my opinion. Amazon VisaWhile you get used to the routine of buying items from Amazon, Amazon Visa is worth an extra tool. Use it only for purchases from Amazon and every month you will earn a gift card equal to 3% of your spending on Amazon (if you use it elsewhere, you earn a little less). The nice part is that as soon as a gift card is available, it seems like you're logging off on Amazon.So, let's say you sign up to buy more perishables through Order and Save along by buying some Christmas gifts from Amazon. The total costs up to $300. The next time you buy something from Amazon, you'll be waiting for a $9 credit that can be used on whatever you want. Amazon CouponsNovating Amazon Coupons part of Amazon's website is a great way to get an extra discount on the products you already use. It works just like coupons you make a snippet in a newspaper, except with an Amazon Coupon simply click the coupon product you want, and it takes away the discount for you when you check out. You can also use this in conjunction with ordering and saving to save even more money. Strategies to Save BigEven if you're a semi-frequent user Amazon.com, a lot of these offers stack together really well. For example, Subscribe and Save Synergies very well with Prime membership, as well as setting low price thresholds for items you can buy if they are cheap enough. Given that Amazon has pretty good prices most of the time on many items, if you're a careful shopper who makes little purchases, you can use these tips to get the items you want and need quite cheaply. Here are some of our other favorite strategies: Combine Amazon Coupons with Amazon Subscribe When you use Amazon to subscribe to automatically deliver common household products such as toilet paper and paper towels, you can do a lot about them. However, if you go on Amazon Coupons first and see what's available, that can help you decide which products you'll use. For example, recently I got a $2.00 off toilet paper coupon and then I went and took the extra step to subscribe and save for items more money off the joint. Combine Amazon Mom with Amazon VisaShe are a parent, you know how much it costs buy diapers. When you sign up for Amazon Mom, you'll get all the benefits of Prime plus 20% off diapers. Then, in addition, if you use your Amazon Visa to buy, you get a gift card for 3% of your monthly spending, which you can then contact and use to buy more diapers! Combine a camel, camel, camel with Amazon PrimeUse Camel, Camel, Camel to alert you when objects you want to drop below a certain price. Then, once the item you've been tracking drops into your price range, go and buy it using your Amazon Prime account and deliver it to your house in just two days.
